

Authors

Alan Bourke is a PhD candidate in sociology at York University, Canada, with research interests in urban sociology and qualitative methodology. His recent work has appeared in the Sage Encyclopaedia of Urban Studies (2010). He has an article forthcoming in Urban Education (2011).

Marnie Brady is a PhD student in Sociology at the CUNY Graduate Center, and a Graduate Teaching Fellow at Hunter College. Her work sits at the intersection of urban, social movement, and immigration studies, and considers changes in U.S. urban community organizing approaches vis à vis the state. She has led numerous community-based and participatory action research projects and is currently working with Neil Smith as a contributor and editorial committee member on a forthcoming book chronicling the history of revolts in New York City.

Patricia Ticineto Clough is Professor of Sociology, Women's Studies, and Intercultural Studies at Queens College and the Graduate School of the City University of New York. Her books include Autoaffection (2000), Feminist Thought (1995) and The End(s) of Ethnography (1992, revised 1998).

Kathleen Dunn is a doctoral student in the Sociology Program at the CUNY Graduate Center. Her research interests include urban theory, stratification, and globalization. Her dissertation research focuses on labor's role in the politics of public space through a case study of street vending in New York City.

Nolen Gertz is a doctoral candidate in philosophy at the New School for Social Research and adjunct lecturer at the New York City College of Technology. He has edited the eBook War Fronts (Inter-Disciplinary Press, 2010), and his essay on "Nietzsche and the Red Sox/Yankees Rivalry" can be found in Red Sox and Philosophy (Open Court, 2010). He has also published articles in Res Publica, Journal of Military Ethics, PhaenEx and Philosophical Frontiers.

Melissa Maldonado-Salcedo is a doctoral student in Cultural Anthropology at CUNY Graduate Center. She earned an M.A.I.A in International Affairs at the New School in 2004, and an M.A in Latin American and Caribbean Studies at New York University in 2006. She is an Adjunct Professor at Hunter College in the Department of Africana and Puerto Rican/Latino Studies as well as at Fordham University in the Department of Anthropology and Sociology.

Jamie McCallum is a PhD candidate in Sociology at the GC and a board member of Left Forum. His dissertation is on transnational labor activism in the global South.

Abe Walker is a PhD candidate in Sociology at the City University of New York Graduate Center , an adjunct instructor in sociology at Queens College, and a rank-and-file agitator in AFT Local 2334.

Haj Yazdiha is a graduate student of sociology at Brooklyn College.